Box No. VII Certain defects in the international application

The following defects in the form or contents of the international application have been noted:

see separate sheet

Item V Reasoned statement under Rule 66.2(a)(ii) with regard to novelty, inventive step or industrial applicability; citations and explanations supporting such statement.

The invention relates to a navigation device which can display travel informations, particularly in a car navigation system.

A navigation system is disclosed in document D1 = US-A-6 021 372 and other exemples of GPS based are described in pages 1 and 2 of the description. Known systems, GPS based navigation devices and other forms of embedded systems, execute all the operating system and applications code in place from a large mask ROM or XIP (execute in place) flash memory device. They all require the ROM to be burnt at an early stage in the manufacture of a product. Once the ROM mask is fixed, altering it is costly and can be complex. Hence, ROM based design are inherently not flexible and expansive.

The invention overcomes the above-mentioned drawbacks by providing a navigation device in which the operating system for the navigation device is not integral to the device, neither in a ROM nor on the hard drive, but instead on the same memory card that stores the navigation application and map data used by the navigation device. This card is not a memory device connected to the navigation device by a network, but can be inserted into and removed from the navigation device itself. This goal is achieved according to the combination of features disclosed in the independent apparatus claim (1) and of the independent method claim (9).

Claim 1 therefore is novel and involves an inventive step. The corresponding method claim and the dependent claims consequently are new and involve an inventive step.

Item VII Certain defects in the international application

At the regional stage, the following defects should be corrected:

Reference signs should be introduced throughout the claims.

Care should be taken to avoid, by the inadvertent addition or deletion of subject-
